to make all of his meals. She cooked everything over the large open fire in the kitchen.

One day, the master asked for beans for dinner. The chef laid coal in the fire grate. Then she added straw so the fire would light easily.

The fire was soon burning fiercely. The chef put a pot of water over the flames and tipped in the beans. But one of the beans fell onto the cold stone floor. At the same time, the coals in the fire moved in the heat. A lump of coal fell out of the fire. So did a piece of straw. They both landed on the floor next to the bean.
